ISPCAN PROUDLY PRESENTS – NEW OPEN ACCESS JOURNAL

We are bringing data to action with this new practice-based journal focused on solutions and outcomes for children.

Working at the interface of academics and the field, the new journal brings multi-sectoral child protection and child safeguarding research and practice into constructive and collaborative dialogue.

Our goal is to facilitate innovative solutions to complex public policy and service challenges and promote a shared global knowledge and evidence-based prevention and response agenda.

NEED HELP SUBMITTING YOUR ARTICLE OR PROGRAM TO THE CPP JOURNAL?

The Networked Child: six themes shaping the program

Rethinking protection through communication, participation, collaboration, and innovation. The 2027 scientific program is organized around six themes that connect research, practice, and policy across the child-protection sector.

Prevention, Advocacy and Child-Centred Safeguarding

How communication, participation, advocacy and networks can strengthen primary, secondary and tertiary prevention systems across local, national and international contexts—moving beyond consultation toward meaningful participation, shared decision-making and child-led advocacy.

Strengthening Child Protection Systems: Evidence, Policy and Quality Improvement

How research, policy, lived experience and lessons learned can inform stronger child protection systems and future prevention strategies across all forms of abuse and neglect, with attention to accountability, inequalities, systemic learning and sustainable investment.

Children, Digital Media, AI and Safe Digital Ecosystems

Bringing together children's everyday digital lives with the policies, governance frameworks and support systems required to ensure safe digital ecosystems grounded in children's rights—opportunities and risks linked to AI, digital platforms, online harms and governance.

Sustainable Investment, Workforce Capacity and System Leadership

How sustainable financing, workforce development, implementation science and system leadership can strengthen child protection systems—highlighting prevention investment, organizational accountability and cross-sector partnerships.

Disruption in Traditional Child Protection: Innovation, Systems Change and Transformative Practice

Bold, forward-looking contributions that challenge harmful systems and promote transformative approaches in child protection—innovation grounded in evidence, lived experience and child-centred practice.

Shifting Cultural Norms: Rights, Justice and Inclusive Protection Across Contexts

How legal frameworks, justice systems and inclusive approaches can strengthen children's rights and improve access to protection across diverse cultural, legal and humanitarian contexts.
